Terry L. Ozbun, M.A., R.P.A.

Senior Archaeologist and Lithic Technology Specialist

Terry L. Ozbun has been with AINW since 1994 and has been a member of the senior staff since then. In addition to project management duties at AINW, Terry provides services including teaching, analyses, and writing about lithic technology for specialized analyses of lithic assemblages or projects that involve lithic technology. Prior to joining AINW, he worked for the consulting firm Lithic Analysts, which specialized in lithic technological studies and education. As a 30-year veteran flintknapper and lithic technology specialist, Terry has participated in hundreds of lithic analyses, lithic technology workshops, flintknapping demonstrations, and educational programs. In 1992, Terry and four other American flintknappers/archaeologists met with European counterparts in France to share lithic technological information in commemoration of the historic meeting between Don Crabtree and Francois Bordes in 1964. In 1991 and 1993, Terry traveled to Mexico to consult on obsidian quarries in Michoacán and obsidian blade production at Xochicalco. In 2000, Terry participated in a Danish Neolithic Dagger workshop taught by Errett Callahan.

Teaching Experience:

Instructor (with Dan Stueber) for traditional technologies sessions at the annual Oregon State Parks Archaeology Training, 2007-2013.

Instructor (with John Fagan and Dan Stueber) for one-day Lithic Technology Workshop for professional archaeologists sponsored by the Association of Oregon Archaeologists in 2010.

Instructor (with John Fagan and Dan Stueber) for week-long, intensive lithic technology workshops for federal agency archaeologists and tribes in Arizona, California, and Oregon in 1995 (Introduction); 1997 (Introduction); 1998 (Ground Stone Technology); 1999 (Advanced); 2005 (Introduction); and 2010 (Introduction).

Teaching Assistant to J. Jeffery Flenniken for five-week intensive Flintknapping Fieldschool in 1988, 1989, and 1991.
